11) I think it unnecessary to consult the Regr. The portion between brackets may be omitted - though there would have been no practical illegality in retaining it, for it prescribes preservation (that is Statutory since) & not destruction.

12) The Regr may be separately that there is no rule-making power under the Regn of 1924. § 20 of the Regn however seem to contemplate the permanent preservation of the docts referred to in it - and in the absence of any rule authorising destruction, the presumption is that all registers & docts have to be preserved. If it is considered necessary to destroy any, power to make a rule to that effect has to be taken by an amendment
